By Anatole Shub

PARIS, April 6 (WP) .- Sen. Vance Hartke, D., Ind., asserted today that U. S. involvement in the Indochina war could end, and U.S. prisoners held in North Vietnam could be home "by Christmas" if President Nixon were to announce the total withdrawal of American forces by the end of this year.

"The killing can end in a matter of days." Sen. Hartke fold - news conference here, after three days of conferences with the Communist, U. S. and South Victnamese delegations to the deadlocked Vietnam peace talks. Sen. Hartke said that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegations had assured him that, if an "acceptable date" for total, unconditional U. S. withdrawal were set, they would move speedily to release all prisoners and negotiate a cease-fire to guarantee the safety of withdrawing U. S. forces.

Sen. Hartke made clear that the Vletnamese Communists had not explicitly epproved, as an "acceptable" withdrawal date. Dec. 31, 1971—a date mentioned in Senate resolutions and public opinion polis. However, he noted that in September, 1970, the Viet Cong had proposed a withdrawal date of June 30, 1971an interval of some nine months. Therefore, he surmised a total withdrawal by the end of this year would be acceptable.

As reported by Sen. Hartke, the Vietnamese Communists maintained traditional positions on other aspects of a Vietnam settlement. Thus, a cease-fire to permit U.S. withdrawal would not apply to South Vietnamese forces. The Communists remain unwilling to deal with any Saigon government headed by President Nguyen Van Thieu, Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, and Premier Tran Thien Khiem, de-manding formation of a "provisional coalition government.

The United States, which that such instruments are unable to detect low-yield ex-plosions, insists upon on-site inspections.

Gerard C. Smith, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disermament Agency, has said Washington opposes a partial underground ban hecause altogether. Soviet disarmament negotiator Alexei A Rosbchin rejected the idea today on the grounds that while large tests would be prohibited, the smaller explosions would in fact be legalized."

"Such an approach would hardly facilitate the solution of the problem of the comprehensive test ban," Mr. Roshchin said.

The Soviet Union continues to maintain, he said, that all explosions underground can be detected by seismological means. Earlier, at today's session, Canade proposed a five-point compromise plan to eliminate underground tests.

Canadian disarmament nego tiator George Ignatieff said the 1963 partial test ban treaty which outlawed all other testing simply resulted in more under-

During World War I, Igor Stravinsky was asked by a guard at the French border to declare his profession. "An inventor of music," he said. It was a typical Stravinsky remark: flat, self-assured, flagrantly anti-romantic. The composer who revolutionized the music of his time was a dapper little man who prided himself on keeping "banker's hours" at his work table.

Between the early pieces, written under the eye of his only teacher, Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov, and the compositions of Stravinsky's old age, there were more than 100 works: symphonies, concertos, chamber pleces, songs,

Piano Lessons at 9

At 9, Igor started piano lessons and proved a good student but no prodigy. Nevertheless, his interest in music grew. As a teenager he haunted his father's re-hearsals at the Marynsky Theater. To his parents, the boy's interest in music was "mere amateurism to be encouraged up to a point." They agreed to let a point." They agreed to let him study harmony with a private teacher on condition that he also study law at the University of St. Petersburg.

In four years at the university, Stravinsky recalled, "I probably did not hear more than 50 lectures." For hy this time he had taken the first step toward becoming a composer.

One of his classmates was a son of the great Russian composer Rimsky-Korsakov. In 1902 Stravinsky visited the elder man. gave him some of his early piano pieces for criticism and asked to become his pupil. The composer looked at the scores and replied noncommittally that the young man would need more technical preparation before he could accept him as a student.

A year later there was a more important Diaghilev commission: a ballet on a Russian folk tale. The Firebird." for the Russian ballet's second season at the Paris opera house. Somewhat apprehensively-I was still unaware of my own capabilities"— Stravinsky set to work.

Success of 'Firebird'

The flashing, vigorous "Firehird" was a great success, so great a success that Stravinsky, in his later years, thought of it as an albatross around his neck. Arranged as an orchestral suite, it was played all over the world. The composer was asked to conduct it everywhere. The irony was that, hecause Russia had no international copyright protection, "The Firehird" brought him few royalties.

The next Stravinsky-Diaghilev production was "Petrouchka" (1911), a hrash, colorful hallet about puppets come to life. To signify the insolence of one of the puppets, Stravinsky put some of the music in two keys at once. The combination of an F sharp major arpeggio and a C major arpeggio was to he known ever afterward as "the Petrouchka chord." It was the first important use of hitonality in modern music. The ballet was another popular success. More important, said the composer: "It gave me absolute conviction of my ear.

While completing "The Firebird." Stravinsky had a daydream about a pagan ritual in which a young girl danced herself to This was the genesis of The Rite of Spring," a revolutionary work whose première in Paris on May 29, 1913, caused one of the noisiest scandals in the history of music.

Barbarous Music

Protests against the music-barbarous, erotic, unlike anything Paris had ever heard-began almost as soon as the curtain went up on opening night.

Less than a year later Pierre Monteux conducted a concert verslon of the score in Paris, and Stravinsky received a hero's ova-

World War I separated the composer permanently from his homeland (he did not see Russia again until a tour in 1962). It also marked the start of a new style for Stravinsky-a leaner, astringent, less colorful musical idiom that critics were to label "neoclassical."

An early work in the new manner was "The Soldier's Tale," written in 1918. This was a jazzy theater piece with only seven instrumentalists. The economy of orchestration was less a matter with the composer's first work, of esthetic choice than of prac-

> In the years that followed Stravinsky's postwar move to Paris, the "Apollonian principles" (as he liked to call them) of order and restraint replaced the Dibnysian eestasy of the big early WOTES.

> > The New Style

Representative of another aspect of the new style was "Pul-cinella" (1920), a ballet at Diaghi-lsv's suggestion. This work employed themes attributed to the 8th-century composer Glovanni Battista Pergolesi, with contemporary glosses by Stravinsky. The composer called it "my discovery of the past."

Stravinsky now looked to the past for his models. The trick, he said, would be "to make use of academic forms . . . without becoming academic."

A piano concerto composed for his first American tour, in 1925, evoked Bach and the baroque. 'Oedipus Rex" (1926) suggested a Handel oratorio. "Le Baiser de la Fee" (1928) was an explicit tribute to Tchaikovsky.

"Apollon Mussgete" (1928) was 2 severe and stately "white hallet," scored for strings alone. "Capricelo," for piano and or-chestra (1929), reminded some of an up-to-date Carl Maria von Weber, "Persephone" (1933) wore the pastels of the Impressionists.

Form and Content

The forms had been used by others. The contents were unquestionably new and unquestionahly Stravinsky's - complicated. tic-like rhythms, harmonies no less audacious for being uttered in a moderate tone of voice. During this period the composer was often accused of antiquarianism, but no one ever called him old-fashioned. To the end he was an avant-garde composer.

In his middle years Stravinsky turned more and more to purely instrumental music, including the "Dumbarton Oaks" concerto for chamber orchestra (1938), the Symphony in C (1940), the Symphony in Three Movements (1946). His dogged productivity did not lessen with increasing age. Hov-ing moved to the United States in 1939, Stravinsky arranged "The Star-Spangled Banner" for a performance in Boston—and brought in the police, who simost arrested him for tampering with the national anthem.

Then he moved to Los Angeles, where he composed the rest of his works. "Danses Concertantes" (1942), a chamber piece, was commissioned by the Werner Janssen Symphony Orchestra of that city, "Orpheus" (1948) was a ballet choreographed by an old friend, George Balanchine.

Rake's Progress'

As a young man Stravinsky had written two operas. "The Emperor's Nightingale" (1908-1914) and "Mayra" (1922). After World War II he began a third. "The Rake's France, Portugal Progress." with a libretto by W.H. Auden and Chester Kallman. It was a deliberate re-creation of Mozartean 18th - century style First performed in 1951, 1t received the usual mixed reviews.

For years Stravinsky and Arnold Schoenberg were thought to divide the world of contemporary music between them. Stravinsky was head of the tonal camp: those whose works, dissonant or not, inhabited a universe of harmonic gravity, the world of "key." Schoenberg and his disciples belonged to the 12-tone camp: a world where all notes of the scale were in free fall, none having more harmonic weight or status than another. It was a style of composition, Stravinsky had said, "essentially different" from his Soon after "The Rake's Progress," however, Stravinsky him-

Last Works

Whatever the reason, the tone row was the spine of his last works, among them "Agon," a ballet (1957), "Movements" for plano and orchestra (1960), and "Abraham and Isaac," a "secred ballad" (1964). The change kept him a controversial composer to

This did not bother Stravinsky. "I don't mind my music going on trial," he wrote in 1957, "If I'm to keep my position as a promising young composer I must accept that."

What Stravinsky could not accept was "the professional ignoramus, the journalist-reviewer pest." His battles with music critics became legendary. But Stravinsky's scorn was no reserved for writers only. He disliked showy performers and conductors "Stokowski's Bach? Bach's Stokowski would be more like it." The dislike turned to loathing when the performer was caught mis-"interpreting" (a word the meticulous composer considered a personal afront) one of his pieces. Stravinsky was a small, wiry man (5 feet 3 inches, 120 pounds) whose morning regimen, until he was 67, started with a set of "Hungarian calisthenics" (including walking on his hands). A renowned hypochondriac, according to his friends, the composer would visit his Los Angeles doctor almost every day-and then hike two miles home.

.It was a frequent criticism of the composer that he not only worked like a husinessman hut also charged like one.

Stravinsky coolly agreed that he had nsver "regarded poverty as attractive" and that his amhition was "to earn every penny that my art would enable ms to extract" from a society that had let Mosart and Bartok die in

Religious Themes

Many of Stravinsky's works, especially during his last years, were based on religious themes-"Symphony of Psalms" (1930), "Canticum Sacrum" (1966) "Threni" (1958) and others.

To write good church music, the composer maintained, one had to believe, literally, in what the church stood for: "the person of the Lord, the person of the devil and the miracles of the church." He was himself such a believer.

Born into the Russian Orthodox Church, he left it in 1910. Lafer he discovered "the necessity of religious belief" and was a regular communicant from 1926 to 1939. Thereafter his churchgoing lapsed a hit. (The music, he com-

Stravinsky Put His Stamp Ge On a Generation of Musicians

By Harold C. Schonberg Music critic of The New York Times

When the history of 20th- took the word of the professionals. century music comes to be written. Igor Stravinsky will occupy the most prominent position in the period from about 1910 to the beginning of World War II. More than any other composer, he put his mark on an entire generation. He was a shaper, a seminal force, a creator who was the symbol of the musical avant-garde not only in the public eye but also much more important—in the estimation of his fellow musicians. The strange thing is that Stravinsky never was a composer especially popular with the pub-lic. It irritated him that his only works that achieved real international popularity were the early "Firebird" (1909) and "Petrouch-ka" (1911). It is true that other-works have been a strong part of the repertory. One thinks of the "Symphony of Psalma," "Oedipus Rex." "Histoire du Soldat." "Le Sacre du Printemos." But in any popularity poll Sizavinsky would be far down were it not for his first two ballets. His music has been called dry, cerebral, intellectual; and this too irritated the composer. He would acidly ask what was wrong with having a brain.

All-Embracing

But the fact remains that the influence of Stravinsky was nevertheless all-embracing, and that is a testimonial to his musical strength. No weak composer, no mere technician could so have stimulated the creative processes of virtually every living composer of his time. . , After "Petroochka," with its famous bitonal combination of F sharp against C major, virtually every European composer started experimenting with polytonality. And after "Le Sacre du Printemps," every composer for years was playing with ostinatos (a recurrent rhythmic figure in the bass), block harmonies, atonality and planes of sound. The great figures-Bartok, Prokofiev, Copland, everybody—all were hypnotized by Stravinsky's ideas. Only the Viennese atomalists headed by Arnold Schoenberg held sloof

Stravinsky above all was a rhythmic innovator. It was he whn introduced the kind of eccentric rhythm that neverthe-less had a rhythmic unity that covered an entire work. It is significant that the world of ballet was never far away, and many consider him one of the two greatest composers of balist music, Tchnikovsky being the other. Stravinsky's music, in conjunction with George Balanchine's choreography, seemed naturally to fall into place, its rhythms "made" for dancers.

Stravinsky was never interested in melody; and, indeed, could not be classified as an important melodist, even on his own terms. What he worked for, during the greater part of his career, was pointed development, exquisite workmanship, stripped-down or-chestrations and music that was above all logical and clear. Musicians responded enthusias-tically to this kind of sheer compositional logic. And if the public was less impressed, it nevertheless aligned foreign policy.

However, the Christian Demo-cratic party came out of the election with 25.62 percent of the vote and remained the largest single party in Chile. Although the Christian Democrats support some aspects of Mr. Allende's program, particularly nationalization of United States copper interests here, they are an anti-Marxist opposition force that has blocked such government initiatives as neighborhood courts. At the same time, the right, represented by the National party and the Democratic Radical party, won just under 22 percent of the national vote. This was 5 percent more than was won by candidates of the Communist party, a main element of Mr. Allende's coelition. The Com-munists got 16.96 percent, a slight gain over their vote in previous elections.

The really big gainer in the Popular Unity coalition was Mr. Allende's Socialist party, which won 22.38 percent of the vote. This was half again as much as the Socialists ever received before. The increase was attributed sident's rise in popularity since taking office.

The main issue in Congress now is the constitutional amendment by which Chile would nationalize U.S. interests in mixed copper companies. The U.S. investment is close to $700 million. The Christian Democrats have joined with Popular Unity legislators to approve the measure in the Senate, and it will be voted on in the lower chamber tomor-

Etna Erupts; High Winds Bar Scientists

CATANIA, Sicily, April 6 (AP). —A howling blizzard with icy snow driven by 125-mile-an-hour winds today beat back scientists who tried to learn wbether towering Mt. Etna's new eruption might endanger tourist towns on the mountain slope.

Europe's tallest volcano fumed and thundered as lava streamed ai 600 feet an hour from five new craters which burst open in the past 24 hours just below the huge central cone.

One crater was within 65 feet of the big Eina observatory, and lava damaged part of the building. Another river of molten rock endangered the head of the cableway leading up to the ob-

An international team of ex-perts led by Prof. Alfred Rittman, noted Swiss vulcanologist, was unable to reach the endangered observatory. They were driven back by the violent storm to a lookout station at 1,800 meters' elevation almost halfway down the mountain.

Lateral Eruptions

Prof. Ritiman's team had tried to reach the observatory to study whether the outbreak might be a prelude to what they call a lateral eruption-when breaks develop in the deep, lava-filled throat of the volcano and streams of molten rock burst out far down the side of the two-mile-high volcano. These outbreaks might be near towns on the lower slope. The five new craters broke out one after another in the past 24 hours around the south and east slopes about 1,300 feet below the big central crater.

By this morning some of the lava streams had flowed half a mile down the slope.

Lava Ten Feet Deep

The outpourings of lava, in some places ten feet deep and more than 50 yards wide, were accompanied by rhythmic explosions which blasted ash high into the air.

The natural fireworks show was watched through the night by thousands of tourists who have come for Easter to Taormina and other resorts on the coast at the foot of the volcano.

These towns are many miles down the mountainside and are never endangered except by latera! eruptions from down from the cone.

Bonn to Increase Aid to Farmers By $130 Million

BONN, April 6 (Reuters) .- The West German government yester-day decided to give farmers financial support worth about 480 million marks ($130 million) in addition to the 920 million marks ($250 million) in direct subsidies already granted annually since the revaluation of the mark, Government spokesman Ruediger von Wechmar said the measures would be instituted in the next few months for a period of one year. He added that the proposals were a supplement to the results of the negotiations on agriculture at the Common Market in Brussels last month. These raised prices on certain farm products, and predded national governments into instituting some structural reforms for the overproducing industry.

Of the 480 million marks, every farmer will probably receive about 30 marks for each 2.47 acres in direct payments, informed sources said. The remainder of the money is divided into aid for modernization, welfare benefits such as old age pensions and insurance, preferential interest rates and aid for those who wont to leave the land.

Daley Expected to Triumph As Chicagoans Go to Polls

CHICAGO, April 6 (AP).pected to turn out today to determine whether Mayor Richard J. Daley should run Chicago for au unprecedented fifth four-year

His opponent is Richard E. Friedman, 41, a bachelor who bolted the Democratic party to run against the 68-year-old Mr. Daley as a Republican.

Early voting today indicated the lightest turnout in a mayoral election in 40 years. Despite the bright, chilly weather, poliwatchers said early voting at key precincts indicated a vote of just over 60 percent. Stanley T. Kusper jr., chairman of the Chicago Election Board of Commissioners, projected that only 982,000 of the 1.5 million registered voters will cast ballots.

Polls indicate Mr. Friedman's campaign, hitting Mr. Daley's regime as one of "bricks and mor-tar" but with little concern for people, probably will make inroads into what was expected to be another easy triumph for Mr. Daley. Chicago has had Democratic mayors for 44 years.

One big question is the Negro vote. There are 300,000 Negroes eligible to cast ballots and in past years they have voted the Demo-cratic "straight ticket" almost

But the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson head of Operation Breadbasket, who unsuccessfully sued in the U.S. Supreme Court to win a place on the election ballot, has endorsed Mr. Friedman.

One black is on the ballot. He is Joseph Bertrand, former basketball star at Notre Dame and Mr. Daley's choice as Democratic candidate for treasurer.

Both sides are confident that voter turnout above the one million mark will be helpful to their candidate. Friedman backers feel the mayor's hard-core supporters will turn out no matter what and that any votes in excess of a million votes will go to Mr. Friedman. Mr. Daley said yesterday. "The

Sensitivity over invasions of privacy and political surveillance has been growing in the United States, in the wake of revelations that Army intelligence had taken a hand in the game. This sensitivity is amply justified. The United States neither needs ner wants a revival of the witch-hunting atmosphere of the 1950s, nor does it want or need a massive accumulation of information on individual opinions and acts-a memory bank to help Blg Brother watch over the citizenry. At the same time it must be recognized that McCarthyism was an exaggerated reflection of a real danger: the actnal existence of espionage within the

In other words, the FBI has a part to play in discovering the seurcas of politically inspired crimes and tracking dewn their perpetrators. That part is a delicate and difflcult one, precisely because, Mr. Boggs to the centrary notwithstanding, the FBI is not a Gestapo. It does not have a subservient court system to protect itself or te punish these against whom It may act, nor does It have a government and public opinion that would accept Gestapo tactles.

The real problem confronting the American people with respect to their principal criminal investigatory agency is the peculiar status of its bead. J. Edgar Hoever has done good work with the FBI. But. in the process. he has become an oracle to some Americans and a bone of cententien for others. Neither role serves the cause of justice in the United States, nor does Mr. Hoover's age nf 76 inspire confidence in many who have otherwise ne strong feelings aheut his personality or policies. He is already fooming larger as a political issue in the fortbcoming campaign, and this will not help the FBI find its true role. It would not be inappropriate for Mr. Boggs to apologize to Mr. Hoover for his personal attack-but it would be even more appropriate for Mr. Hoover to resign.

Nixon's 'System of Constraints'

If imprecision is an unavoidable characteristic ef national economic policy-making, President Nixon's on-again, off-again "national emergency" decisions having to dn with wages and prices in the construction industry might qualify as logical moves in the overall attempt to curb inflation.

After all, the President's Council of Economic Advisers laid the groundwork earlier this year for an ill-defined but all-out attack on the problem which, with luck and public relations and a few political breaks. was supposed to work. 'What is called for," sald the advisers, "is a policy of doing what can effectively be done, wherever it can be done, and not pretending to do more."

Given this solid commitment to unspecified government_action, the administration set about exploring ways, short of out-and-out controls, to curb the wage-cost spiral in ennstruction. After some talk about a wageprice freeze, the President decided instead to suspend the Davis-Bacon Act, dealing with wages nn federal construction projects. a move based on deciaration of a "national emergency."

government contractors to pay prevailing wages as determined by the Laber Department for geographical areas. The Prosident's argument was that scales under this process frequently had been "set to match the highest wages paid on private projects" -though nobody really explained why the department did it that way in the first place.

That was a menth ago, when Labor Secretary James Hoegson said, "We had to acknewledge that any veluntary actien hy them Junion leaders) to restrict wage increases was net in the cards, certainly not in the immediate future." The idea, though it failed to deal with prices and profits in any convincing way, was to "encourage industry people themselves in their effects to do something about this problem," Mr. Hodgson explained.

unien laber at lower pay scales, the Davis-Bacon suspension has been rescinded in favor of a "system of constraints" on wages and prices, on a sort of voluntary-or-else

The new order spells out guidelines for wage increases with a ceiling formula that figures nut to 6 percent a year, subject to adjustments for local inequities, to be overseen by an industry committee with four representatives of labor, four of industry and four from the public. Implicit in the order is the threat of another Davis-Bacon suspepsion; expilcit is the threat that "unacceptable" wage rates will not be allowed in government projects, which account for about one-third of the nation's total annual expenditure for building; unclear is just what is to be done about prices, profits, executive salaries or stack optiops, beyond the establishment of a governmental interagency committee which is supposed to develop "criteria."

The switch from Davis-Bacon suspension to this new form of warning is described by Mr. Hodgson as "a largely self-regulating This action lifted provisions requiring process." President Nixon says the industry and labor leaders had indicated their willingness to cooperate (though we aren't seeing this in any public statements frem the unions), and perhaps this heavy threat will previde the kind of cover needed in finding a way out of the spiral. Certainly, there are some union leaders whn. deep dnwn, see the handwriting en the wall, but who need official pressure if they are to convince their memberships.

But just as the Davis-Bacon suspension opened up all serts of strong complaints from organized labor that it was a ene-sided, anti-union actien, the "system of constraints" may fail to demonstrate that management as well as labor has been put on notice te ceme up with a hetter way to do husiness. If this turns out to be the case, people are likely to read the President's economic policy as mere of a game than a America's reaction to the Fort Benning verdict and President Nixon's decision to give Calley some freedom pending appeal delight me. At last, a country which believed in the notion of war crime and Insisted for the punishment of defeated leaders at the end of the last world war scems to change its heart. am not especially a lover of militarist attitudes, far from it. I think that in too many countries, like France for instance, the army is too sacred a cow. On the battlefield of a revolutionary war, there are two sorts of people: those who necessarily volunteered to fight (the guerrillas) and the others (the regular soldlers and the civilians). Politically, one can discuss indefinitely whether the guerrilla warfare is an answer to an aggression or a mere aggression itself. Morally, there is no queskillings of civilians or regular troopers by its guerrillas are worse thap anything regular soldiers can do, since all guerrillas are volunteers. Politically or on the field, the victory has been on the guerrillas side in World War II, Algeria, the first Indochina war. So, do not ask why you only hear of the so-called atroctics of the other camp: only defeated men can be war criminals. I am happy the American opinion is not so poisoned with that kind of prejudice. Unnecessary killings of guerrillas and even of civilians cannot be worse a crime than not to try to save the lives of regular

:It was politic for Mr. Nixon to give Lt. Calley a measure of freedom, faced as the President is with an unanswerable moral and political dilemma over My Lat in particular and the Southeast Asia war in general. At the same time I would like to think his action was motivated in part by compassion and understanding, timeless qualities so rarely expressed by world leaders today.

BREST, France—The French fishing industry has faced several crises in recent years. Pirst, the ban on mest on Pridays was lifted for French Catholics on Jan. 1, 1967. Then there have been wild fluctuations in prices, rising costs of material and labor and pollution scares.

On the other hand, the opening of new outlets through the Common Market and improved distribution methods have helped the industry, and the state radio and television have been exhorting Frenchmen to eat fish at least twice a week. The Breton Maritime Fisheries Group tried yet another approach last Friday; they showed the role fish can play in gastronomy.

They borrowed an aircraft carrier, the Clemenceau, from the government and asked the recently formed association of chefs, La Grande Cuisine Francaise, to create and cook an allfish meal in the ward rooms.

This culinary association groups ten restaurateurs who share 26 Michelin stars.

The conditions were anything but ideal: the Clemencean's kitchens are a deck below the four different messes that had to be serviced by cheerful, willing but inexperienced sailors. The result was magnificent, nearly as perfect as if it had been prepared in one of the chefs' three-star

NAPLES, April 6.— Two years engaging. ago the company of the Teatro San Carlo went from Naples to Brazil, where they gave a 1850 as easily as 1870; the rehighly successful season of Italian opera. This week the Brazilians return the compliment. Soloists, ballet, director, and producer from the municipal theaters of Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro have come to the San Carlo, with a production of Brazil's national opera "Il Guarany" hy Antonio Carlos Gomez. The work actually is as much Italian as Brazilian, Gomez studied in Milan, thoroughly absorbed the Italian musical idiom, and "Il Guarany" had its world premiere at La Scala in 1870. At that Milanese premiere, "Il Guarany" enjoyed a huge success, and the opera was a popular component of the standard Italian operatic repertory until World War I, and even afterwards.

Campinas. His unhappy childhood was brightened only hy his evident talent, which the Emperor Pedro II encouraged. It was the emperor, in fact, who sent Gomez to Milan. His Italian success was promptly re-imported to Brazil and has remained popular there, Its appeal, both to the Milanese of a century ago and to the Brazilians today, is not hard to understand. Though the orchestration is simple, pedestrian at times there is a steady flow of tunes. Like his contemporary. Ponchielli, Gomez had a head full of melodies. They are not always ap-propriately used (the savage tribe mazurka), but they are catchy. Musically, the opera is reactionary. It could have been written in miniscences, the influences are Bellini and Donizetti rather than Wagner. This is probably why the Scala audience (conservative then as now) liked it so much. The production seen in Naples was also, charmingly, conservative. The sets were firmly, colorfully representational: Green jungles and wooden stockades. The staging, by Aldo Calvo, wisely followed the libretto's instruceven the nn vision of the noble savage and the governor's blonde daughter en route to safety and happiness past a lofty waterfall. Armando Belardi, a Brazilian of Italian origin, conducted the San Carlo Orchestra with unsubtle, but effective vigor. There were no outstanding singers in the cast, hut all did their jobs well and were cordially applauded. "Il Guarany will probably never return to the repertory, but it is surely worth

Salomon Brothers' initial policies on competitive commission rates for listed stock transactions.

Our firm welcomes the first step in the implementation of the Securities and Exchange Commission's conclusion that "... fixed minimum commissions on institutional size orders are neither necessary nor

Effective Monday, April 5th, we will negotiate with our customers the commission on that portion of each order in excess of $500,000 subject to the following:

AGENCY TRANSACTIONS. Pending experience with competitive rates, no formal agency schedule will be posted by Salomon Brothers at this time, but we will endeavor to be as competitive as possible in effecting these trades.

PRINCIPAL TRANSACTIONS. We think it important to assure that prices, particularly for principal transactions with their inherent risk, continue to be reflected realistically in the tape print. Accordingly, listed below are the maximum commissions that Salomon Brothers will not exceed on any principal transaction.

Price per share	Maximum Commission per share
$ 1 to $ 24 1/8	15¢
$ 25 to $ 497/8	25¢
$ 50 to $ 99%	50¢
$100 to $1997/8	75¢
$200 and above	$1.00 '

Depending upon the actual risk involved, our commission on any particular principal transaction may be substantially lower than the above amounts.

If you are an institutional investor and have any questions about how this policy will affect you, please call any Salomon Brothers representative.

Normally, central banks recycle some of their dollar boldings to the Eurodollar or New York money market.

Sources explained that a further squeeze could be applied if funds held in the Eurodollar market by the Bank for International Settlements (BIS) on behalf of central banks were also withdrawn.

Eurodollar borrowings of the U.S. Export-Import Bank and Treasury, currently totaling $3 billion, could be supplemented or rolled over, they added. Plans for such coordinated action, scurces said, will be made by central bank governors at their regular meeting at the BIS here the weekend of April 17.

If the strategy is accepted, co-operation of the U.S. Federal Reerve System would be needed to bring short-term U.S. interest rates higher sources implied, because transfers between U.S. and Eurodollar markets are so casy that it would be difficult to bring Eurodollar rates higher without some increase in U.S. rates. Observers noted that the Fed their bank lines that total about 5960 million in ali. The Chrysler source said sales of new commercial paper have been huft because many commercial paper investors, such as pension funds and state-regulated funds, are restricted from buying any paper that is not rated "prime"—the designation Dun & Bradstreet formerly had given the units. Chrysler itself does not bave any commercial paper outstanding.

Some analyats still are skeptical about Chrysler's carnings prospects, and want more evidence before calling a fundamental turn in its fortunes. One reason is that part of the improvement in first-quarter results reflects a change in Chrysler's method of evaluating its inventories.

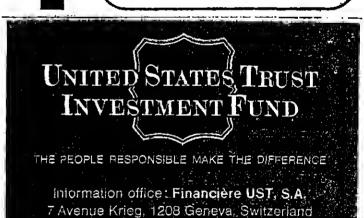

Another reason is that its penetration in the U.S. market appears to be suffering because it does not have any U.S.-made small auto.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Auto Import Sales Set U.S. Record

Sales of U.S.-made autos soared 24.1 perceut in late March from the year-earlier period, but the industry's strong performance was overshadowed by record sales of imported cars for the mouth. For all of March, dealers delivered 755.402 U.S.-make cars, up 12.7 percent from the year-earlier period. But a Wall Street Journal survey indicates that overseas auto makers sold a record 138,000 cars in March, topping the previous record of 124,000 units set last October and far countripping the 98,000 cars sold in March 1870. Volkswagen's sales of 54,418 units was up 12.2 percent, Toyota sales of 23,501 units were up 65.8 percent, and Datsun sales of 14.965 units were up 176.6 percent from the year-ago level. Lale March sales for General Motors were up 37.5 percent, Ford rose 15.4 percent, Chrysler's were up 11.8 percent and American Motors fell 4.8 percent.

Growth of U.S. Exports Seen Slowing The National Foreign Trade Council expects the rate of growth of U.S. exports to slow this year. Exports are expected to rise to a record $45.7 billion this year from $42.6 billion in 1970. the council said, indicating a 7.3 percent rise compared to a 13.1 percent rise in 1870. The anticipated decline in the growth rate was attributrd largely to o alowing of economic growth in Europe The trada council, which based its projections on a survey of its member companies, said outo and aircraft exports are expected to German Unemployment - NUREMBERG, April 8 (Reuters).—West German unemployment fell to 1 percent of the labor force in March from 1.2 percent in February but was slightly higher than the 0.9 percent level of March last year, the Federal Labor Office said today. The oumber of unemployed fell to 206.500 in March from 254,800 the The March 1870 total was 197,890. previous month.

If East-West had stayed out of the auction, on the diagramed deal, North-South might have been content to play in a part-score in hearts. But East open-ed with a weak two-bid in spades, and this provoked North-South into reaching game.

the diagramed auction, South was not really entitled to overcall at the level of three, but he was one of those players who hate to be shut out by a pre-emptive bid. In this case, his aggression paid a dividend.

North was not enthusiastic about hearts, but he had to bid game in some denomination and the others seemed even less attractive. West led the spade king, and South liked his prospects. He hoped to lose one spade trick, one heart trick and one diamond trick, but he had to tread carefully.

He allowed the spade king to win the first trick, knowing that a weak two-bid is nearly always a six-card suit rather than a seven-card suit. He won the spade continuation with the ace, and resisted the temptation to ruff his remaining spade imme-

CONSCIENCE AND COMMAND:

Justice and Discipline in the Military Edited by James Finn, Random House, 300 pp. $8.95; Vintage paperback edition, $1.95.

Reviewed by Maj. Jesiah Bunting 3d

THE VIETNAMESE WAT to paraphrase Hobbes, has been nasty, brutish and long. The daily litany in the press-of lives lost, villages obliterated, strategies discredited, goals repudiated has all but stifled reflection on its possible long-term benefits. And such there may be.

The most vocal critics of military justice and discipline will, for example, see the Calley de-cision as evidence that perhaps the Army can administer true, disinterested "justice." The mili-tary tribunal of career officers, passing judgment on a most ghastly tragedy of the war, rendered an obviously impartial de-cision in judging one of its dered an obviously impartial decision in judging one of its it has been overtaken by civiling to the victimal of the victimal and judges their failures is out of date? This is the contention of James Finn's anthology, "Con-science and Command."

Western political thought has been dominated by a single question: Can the state reconcile its need for order with the demands of its citizens for individual liberty and justice? Politicians, professors and intellectuals have never tired of trying to answer it.
In its various forms the question is now asked repeatedly by the young, many of whom are drafted into the armed forces and frequently their answers are not acceptable to the "Establishment." Their experience in the military only sharpens their de-mand for an answer, for an answer that is satisfactory not only for the state, but for its military servant.

At the very least, they say, should not the armed forces develop a system of jurisprudence, implement a system of discipline which reflects American society's answers to the question? With all its imperfections, civil society at least seems to be trying to djust its answer to fit new. realities.

Is the military unique because of its special mission—unique and therefore arguably immune from the mores and justice American society at large enjoys? Gen. Eisenhower, who veiled a shrewd and capable brain with a maddeningly involuted syntax, thought it must be: The Army "was never set up to insure justice. It is set up as your servant, a servant of the civilian population of this country to do a particular job... and that function in its successful performance demands within the Army somewhat, almost of a violation of the very concepts soldiers refusing to obe upon which our government is remain rare exceptions. established."

Young soldiers must therefore expect two or three years' service in a kind of ministore state whose very mission disqualifies it from granting them the liberties—especially of freedom of speechof civilian life.

Is it reasonable to suppose they will tolerate such constraints? ington Post.

James Finn and the impres group of essayists who treat subject in various of its aspecta think not.

The book addresses two aspects of the problem: Is military justice fair? Is military discipline in presently administered, especially in training centers and garriant posts outside the immediate conbat theater, prerequisite to succe in combat and combat-relate

Carr Signs With NBA Cavaliers

League Also Gets Smith and Wicks

CLEVELAND, April 6 (AP) -Austin Carr of Notre Dame, the first player picked in the National Basketball Association's college draft last week, has signed with the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed. Cavaliers owner Nick Mileti only said that it was "n contract besitting the No. 1 col-lege player in the country. It's one of the finest contracts offered in professional sports."

It is believed that Carr signed a multi-year contract calling for $1.5 million to be paid over a 20-year period.

Coach Bill Fitch revealed at the signing ceremonies yesterday that Carr, named the college player of the year, will team with John Johnson, the Cavaliers' No. 1 pick in 1970, at the guard positions next season.

Carr, who is 6-foot-3, and Johnson. 6-7, would give the Cleveland team one of the tallest backcourt pairs in the NBA.

Johnson is currently serving a four-month tour of duty with the Netional Guard.

Carr said his choice for a professional basketball career was with the NBA. He said he was contacted once by the American Basketball Association, but never by the Virginia Squires, the team that drafted him in the third round.

The second leading scorer in the nation in the last two years, Carr averaged 34.5 points per game in his three years at Notre

BUFFALO, N.Y., April 6 (UPI). -Elmore Smith, 7-foot center from Kentucky State, signed a multi-year contract yesterday with the Buffalo Braves of the NBA after telling newsmen be earlier rejected a $2.2 million pact with the Carolina Cougars of the ABA. The terms of Smith's contract with the Braves were not disclosed, but owner Paul Snyder said the payments would be spread out over "approximately a 20-year period."

Smith averaged 25.5 points per game and grabbed 799 rebounds this past season to lead Kentucky State to its second consecutive National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics championship. He shot 59 percent from the field.

Now on another subject, when did you first realize that you were in love with baseball?"

"Actually, I don't like baseball very much, but I realized carly in life that it was a good way to get into televisiou. That's what I'd really like to do. # Middle Age May Begin at 35

By Joan Cook

NEW YORK NTT.-A 47-year-old Madison Avenue account executive was talking: "There is a chemistry between men and women, an unacknowledged flash of recognition that takes place when you see a pretty girl on the street. Then one day you walk past a pretty girl and you still feel it, but she looks through you as if you were a pane of glass."

A 40-year-old head of a successful corporation: "I keep feeling more Rud more depressed, and I can't figure out why. I've gone as high as I can go, there's nothing wrong with my life, but I just cau't seem to shake this feeling of. So here I am, so

A 46-year-old manufacturer's representative: "For years you have the idea in the back of your mind. 'If I don't like this, I'll cut out aud go somewhere else, change jobs, try a whole new field.' Then one day you look in the mirror and see white hairs. and bags under your eyes, and you know you've had it. You're not going any place except to the cemeters."

Gray Area

Although extensive research has been done on the young and on the elderly, relatively little has been done on the socalled "middle years," a gray area that was once felt to begin about age 45 and now, with the youth explosion, appears to have been pushed down to 40 or even 35.

What causes the crisis? How does it differ from women in middle years? Although menopause for women is a definite physiological change, recent studies indicate that some changes, while considerably less dramatic, also take place in men. There are those-medical men and lay experts-who take exception to the whole idea of a male "menopause," maintaining that such a notion is scientifically invalid. One of them is Dr. Edgar F. Berman, the retired Maryland surgeon who made headlines last year when he asserted that women are limited in their leadership potential i.e., the presidency, by physiological and psychological factors, especially during the menstrual cycle and the menopause,

"I personally from my own experience don't think that there is a male climacteric ia critical period in the life cycle, such as a woman's menopause. " Dr. Berman salo. "Both sexes go through the same emotional state of aging but over and beyond that women have hormoual changes which precede another emotional state.

'Hot Flashes'

"Give a woman estrogen and the hot flashes clear up . . . No amount of testosterone produces a similar effect on men. Dr. Leon J. Epstein, professor of psychiatry at the University of California at San Francisco and an associate director of the Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute, says that for middle-class men in middle age there are a number of cop-outs.

"A man whose children are in college at this age is at a point of high-peak demands on him," he said. "And his alternatives aren't as great. He can become a superathlete and play tenuls more vigorously; he can go out with more girls more frequently; he can fall apart; or he can work three times as hard." Starting the whole thing may well be a change in the amount of hormones secreted

Aspirations

While the blue-collar worker may be experiencing similar changes, medical experts agree that he is less likely to have the time or the opportunity to dwell on then than his more affluent, middle-class counterpart.

"As long as he is aspiring, the success ful middle or upper-middie-class man can project his depression or frustration onto the outside world," said Dr. William Gaylin, a Manhattan psychiatrist. "Once R man has made a success of his career." Dr. Gaylin said, "a sense of panic and inadequacy sometimes sets in. The man is inclined to ask himself, Is this what I've heen struggling for?"

"Almost any damn fool can find some 22-year-old with a father image to marry him and some do," Dr. Gaylin said. "Middle-class men whose lives are oriented to work, status and achievement sometimes turn to sexual activity for reassurance, and, at the same time, blind themselves to the Idea of encroaching age,"

An unsettling time for meu and women alike, many marriages succumb to the multiple problems of middle age and end In divorce, As one man put it, "I don't mind being a grandfather but I can't stand being married to R grandmother." According to the U.S. Public Health Service, about 1 percent of all initial marriages in the natioo involve middle-aged people-but 26 percent of those remarrying are middle-

Dr. Eugene Silberman, associate clinical professor of obstetrics and gynecology, New York Medical College, said that while impotence "is often associated with this 'change of life,' it is not an inevitable

"Impotence at such a time," be said, "may relate to a combination of things: increased business pressures; general health problems; overall lack of vigor and obesity stemming from inadequate physical activ-

The present-day youth cult, with its emphasis on physical beauty, has not helped the middle-aged man adjust his sights. The growing youth market, which in turn has produced ever-younger corporate executives, adds still further pressure to meo in the business world to maintain a vouthful image. And if all this were not enough, the middle-aged man is the nation's No. 1 target for cardiovascular diseases and cancer, not to mention a host of minor tribulations ranging from baldness to bunions, But there are, unquestionably, many men who take the onset of middle age in stride. A suburban doctor who just celebrated his 52d birthday said he had oever enjoyed

One teacher told me she was relating the Good Samaritan story to ber class, making it as vivid as possible so the children would realize what was bappening. Then she asked the class, 'If you saw R person lying on the roadside all wounded and bleeding, what would you do?' A thoughtful little girl broke the hushed silence. I think I'd throw up, she sald."
